10th International Scholars' Symposium on Sports, Society, and Culture

"Olympia & the Struggle for Freedom"

in honor of the bicentennial of Greek independence

October 9 – October 10, 2021 (online)

Harvard's Center for Hellenic Studies in Washington DC, the International Olympic Academy (IOA), and the Center for Hellenic Studies in Greece, Harvard University are organizing the 10th International Scholars' Symposium in the "Sports, Society, and Culture" series on October 9-10, 2021. The online Symposium is open to up to forty junior and senior undergraduates, graduate/Masters students and PhD candidates from a list of departments in Greece and Cyprus.

Topic & description

As part of the international scholarly exchange on sports, society, and cultures, the 2021 meeting of the IOA/CHS Symposium examines the multifaceted relationship between athletics and the pursuit of liberty. Entitled Olympia and the Struggle for Freedom, the 10th International Scholars' Symposium will be held in honor of the bicentennial of Greek independence, hosting online an academic gathering designed to shed new light on Hellenic identity formation and state-building within the broader context of the Olympics, ancient and modern.

Structure

The Symposium follows an asynchronous and synchronous template. On October 2, participants will be offered access to pre-recorded video presentations given by the speakers on this year's topic. On October 9, the Symposium will open with a keynote event, followed by online live sessions.
