6. Criticism and self-criticism
7. Production of free, creative and inductive thinking

3. SYLLABUS

The course will examine the communication between Byzantine authors and scholars through letter-writing from the Early until the Late Byzantine Era. After a short introduction to the theory of epistolography and the basic features of the literary genre in question, students will study various epistles with reference to the correspondents, the literary-social circle they belong to, as well as the epoch of their composition.

Emphasis will be given to the following topics: The Byzantine culture of making text collections; the use of epistles in texts of other literary genres; the translation of Byzantine letters into Modern Greek; the analysis of their content and language; the connection between rhetoric and epistolography; the personal style of distinguished epistolographers and other editorial and genre issues.

During the semester, students will be asked to present selected Byzantine texts, as well as secondary literature on epistolography, and to report on the progress of their essays.
